SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The mid-week meeting of Park Street church on Wednesday evening, will be devoted to the Sunday school work of the church. Mrs. W. Y. Haycock, who is in charge of the Manual Work Department, will give the principal address. Brief talks will be given by Miss Nordbeck, one of the teachers, Roy E. Clark, superintendent, and Rev. Gerald H. Beard. There will be an exhibition of manual work. The parents, relatives and friends of the scholars of our school are especially invited. Here one may see what his boy or girl has done, and hear what the church is doing and hopes to do for all who make this their Sunday school home.

ANIMALS IN CITY

The Animal Rescue league held an open meeting last night at the Board of Trade rooms. Several spoke and told of conditions they have encountered in the city in regard to care of animals.

Alexander Howell, president of the league, presided. Frank Armstrong, major of the boy scouts, explained the work the boys are doing to improve the lot of animals in Bridgeport. Judge Thomas C. Coughlin told of the difficulties being experienced in getting the large number of foreign-born persons acquainted with the laws of the state and the city ordinances. F. W. Bolander pledged his support to the Rescue league movement.

Mrs. Thomas P. Taylor gave an interesting address in which she expressed the opinion that lack of understanding, not wilful neglect, is to blame for the cruelty.

Governor Whitman vetoed the bill amending the penal code so as to prohibit certain uses of information respecting lists of stockholders of corporations.

This Suit Features A New Skirt.

The tailored suit of taffeta is always distinctive, and this design featuring a new four-piece skirt promises to prove exceedingly popular during the summer.

Skirts add more than the usual variety and interest to tailored costumes this year. Taffeta is the popular choice this season and adapts itself congenially to the latest skirt modes. The model shown here is cut in four parts, with the front and back gores in panel style, while the side gores are gathered and tucked.

In medium size the entire costume requires 7 yards 40-inch material, but if made separately the skirt calls for only 4 1/2 yards.

The making is very simple. First form tucks in the side gores, creasing on crosslines of slot perforations; stitch 1 1/2 inch from folded edges.

CONSTRUCTION GUIDE.

Gather upper edge between double "T" perforations. Turn under the side edges of front and back gores on slot perforations, lap on side gore to small "O" perforations, notches even; stitch 1 inch from folded edges to any desired depth, leaving edges to left of center-back free above large "O" perforation in back gore for a placket; press plaits. Turn under lower edge of skirt 3 1/2 inches for a hem.

Adjust the stay to position underneath the skirt, bringing single large "O" perforation to center-front and small "O" perforation to center-back. Then stitch the upper edges of skirt and stay together.

This model is well suited to linen and tub materials frequently used for separate skirts.

HEART TOPICS

Copyrighted, 1915, McClure Newspaper Syndicate

MARRYING TO PLEASE OTHERS

"Never rail at the world. It is just as we make it: We see not the flower if we sow not the seed, And as for ill luck, why, it's just as we take it. The heart that's in earnest no bars can impede."

I am always sorry for a girl when I hear her mother remark with tightly compressed lips, "I shall see to it that my Marjorie marries suitably or she will remain single."

Is it any wonder that the daughter of such a woman begins to have a dread of matrimony at an early age? She looks upon it as a sort of sale and the securing of a bargain. The ambitious mother considers no man "suitable" unless he has wealth. Age, temperament, appearance, honor and health are of minor importance; gold places all his defects.

But what cared youth for wealth when weighed against warm young love—the glance of the eyes that makes the heart beat eagerly and the clasp of the hand whose magnetism sends the blood bounding through the veins, arousing the slumbering soul? God meant every heart to give love spontaneously, answering when the true heart mate calls.

It is the duty of parents to watch carefully, patiently, the progress of a dearly loved daughter's love affair, but it is not their duty to urge her to accept the hand of a man whom they know it will be impossible to give her heart to. If she weds such a man because of being unable to withstand their influence and urging, only for her to blame if she finds marriage a failure and life hardly worth enduring?

It is a pitiful thing for a woman to be brought into the close contact of struggle with a man for whom she can scarcely summon respect. The natural affection born within her must either starve for want of feeding or fasten upon herself—if she is too good a woman to shadow her good name and self respect.

She who centers her affections upon herself degenerates into the cold, heartless woman, caring only for her own pleasures and social triumphs and to be known as the most beautiful of her sex, the most elegantly groomed and bejeweled. It takes love to bring out all that is best in a woman's nature.

If the same woman had been permitted to marry the one young who had appealed to her heart, she would have been a young clerk who had his fortune to make. It would have been the delight of her life to have accepted poverty with him and kept by his side, cheering and encouraging him as he struggled with the world. They would have had to sit down to many a scanty meal prepared frugally by her own hands, but love would sweeten the coarsest viands and make life for the one beloved a dear privilege.

Those who guide the lives of young girls should think long and earnestly ere they turn from their door a suitor for her hand and heart—simply because he has no fortune. If he is honorable and has a good character, is ambitious to work and rise in the world, he is a fortune in himself. Very few young American men have made fortunes, but they have brains and the will power to accumulate it—and that makes husbands to be proud of. It is a blessing to a girl to save her from marrying a drunkard, his ertine, gambler or one who would not work if earnest persuasion would accomplish it, for her love it but a delusion, marriage opening her eyes more quickly than anything else to the gravity of the mistake she made. A girl has a say-so about being born into this world, no voice whatever in the matter, but she should have her say-so concerning her marriage, for that is the next important step in her career. If she marries solely to please others, more often than not she has a hard road ahead of her.

HONEYMOON ATTIRE.

C. E. C. writes: "This is my first letter to you to ask aid. What age do you think best for young people to marry? Is a coat suit suitable to wear when married at parsonage, leaving immediately afterward on honeymoon? Ought a young man of 19 to keep company with a young lady of 22? Young people marry after finding the temperament of one another exactly suitable. No age rule is set. Some young men of 19 are older in ways, habits and plans than those of 25. Know whom they prefer. Coat suit of gray, or your color, is best to wear if wed in parsonage."

FROWN ON JEALOUSY.

L. B. H. writes: "I ask advice. Have a few admirers, but care for none, only as friends. I went to a dance with mother. Accepted a young man's company home. One I like became very jealous. Young man escorted me to call and I do not care for him. He says if I go with him I must give up the other. One is jealous. What am I to do?" Jealousy may cause you to give up both. There are plenty of good admirers and one for you.

MAY BE TRUE.

A. P. writes: "I am a girl of 16 past and go with young man 18 past. People infer he's not quite as good as he might be. He declares he loves none but me. Will not marry any one else. Yet it's hearsay that he is courting another and may wed. Kindly advise."

If hearsays are just partly true why not give him up? You can do as well and better.

HE MAY HAVE A WIFE.

M. W. writes: "I am a girl of 16 past ever so much interested in a man eight years my senior. Am not certain if he loves me. Ought I to keep up interest in him or be escorted by others?"

Should be certain of his love and not allow your affections to be to him unsought. He may have another sweetheart, or, it may be, he has a wife. Accept another escort.

A FEARLESS PHYSICIAN

Such a physician recently remarked:—"The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it cures the very elements needed to tone up the female system and strengthen the depleted organism." Of course that is so, otherwise it could not succeed as it has.—Adv.

THE TOWN BEAUTIFUL

The prevailing mode of town development for the past 25 years in progressive towns has been to lay out streets in checker-board form at right angles. Some theorists of civic progress have advanced the idea of late that a lay-out of curving streets is more beautiful. They point to Germany, though it is usually so regulated, in some of the older and less advanced places, there is a disposition to allow real estate men to run streets in any criss-cross way that will produce the most house lots. Straight streets connecting with each other directly across a town have a beauty of their own. If well planned with trees, lawns and pleasing vistas are created, making a harmonious whole, and giving an impression of space and dignified arrangement.

A great number of cities have of late taken up the idea of town planning boards. Few men would think of constructing a house without a plan. If it is a house of much value, they call in a first class architect. But until within a few years, most towns were content to grow without any publicly adopted plan for development. The result is frequently criss-cross streets, the lack of suitable park land and the failure to secure lots needed in the future for schools and other public buildings, for which high prices will have to be paid later.

TODAY'S POEM

THAT LITTLE BOY AND I

Looking upward at the mirage
In the filmy cloudland low
Playing marbles in the sunset,
Is a boy I used to know.
In a group of lads just gathered,
There reflected in the skies,
With the golden glow of childhood
Shining in his happy eyes.

And he shoots with such precision,
As he pockets all the pile,
And the marbles jingle gaily
As he shakes them with a smile,
"Can't go home because I'm a winner."

Flings he jauntily at me;
I smile back with comprehension
At the boy that once was me.

Oh! lost joys of little boy-time,
Mocking me with glad surprise,
As I gaze in some mm wonder,
Rainbow mist through weeping
eyes;

Watching with a numbing heartache,
Playing there in boyish glee
Through the glow of golden sunset,
A little boy that once was me.

Take my millions, little comrade,
Little boy that once was me,
Fling them to the losers, winner,
Fling them all, just once to be

Trudging home again to mother,
Back to her, just you and I,
Then to feel her arms embracing,
Drawn there by the evening star.

—Sallie A. Fisher in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CORNER FOR COOKS

WILTED LETTUCE

This is an old-fashioned salad and a very good one. Cut half a dozen slices of bacon in cubes and fry a light brown. Add two tablespoons of vinegar to the dripping, also half a teaspoon salt and a liberal sprinkling of paprika. Meantime wash and drain the lettuce very thoroughly; it must have no moisture in it when ready to dress. Then cut across in several places and place in a salad bowl. Pour the hot dressing over it, and serve immediately. Watercress or other greens may be dressed in this way.

RHUBARB PIE

Prepare crust as usual. Use one large cup rhubarb. Pour scalding water on rhubarb and allow to remain about a minute. Drain. Put in bowl cup of sugar and one tablespoon flour. Stir till lumps have vanished. Then break an egg into the sugar and stir again. Then take some of the water drained off the rhubarb and put into the mixture until it will just run (not thin, remember). Line pie crust with the rhubarb and pour mixture over. Cover with crust and bake.

TOASTED SARDINE SANDWICHES

Cut well baked bread into thin slices, spreading every other one with butter and the alternate layers with a nice quality of sardines. Carefully toast the top and bottom of each sandwich and serve immediately.

STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

Wash half a dozen large peppers, put them in boiling water five minutes, rub off the skin with a wet cloth, remove the seeds, and stuff the peppers with one cup dry bread crumbs, one cup of cold meat, minced fine, half a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Set the peppers when stuffed in a deep dish, pour in as much cold gravy as the dish will hold and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. Serve in the dish in which they are baked.

SCALLOPED CRAB MEAT

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, blend in two tablespoonfuls of flour and add gradually one cup of white stock. Stir until thickened, season with one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of paprika and a dash of cayenne, add one beaten egg, cook a minute longer, remove from the fire and add one cup of crab meat and four tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms. Turn into buttered shells, cover with crumbs moistened with melted butter and bake until brown.

STEAMED PRUNE PUDDING

One egg, one large cup of butter-milk, one-half cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and a half cups of prunes, pinch of salt and nutmeg. One and a half cups of flour. Cream the butter and sugar and add the beaten egg and the soda dissolved in the milk. Sift the sugar and nutmeg with the flour into the mixture and chop the prunes fine and add these last. Steam three hours. This may be served with hard sauce or any custard sauce desired.

OATMEAL DROP CAKES

One-half cupful of oatmeal porridge, one quarter cupful of shortening, one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, one-half cupful of milk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, and two well-beaten eggs. Cream the sugar and shortening together, then add the milk slowly, eggs, flour, baking powder and oatmeal. Grease the molds, drop a spoonful of the mixture into each one, then put two or three raisins or currants on the top and bake in a quick oven for 15 or 20 minutes.

A NEW SALAD

Pulp of four oranges, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped mint, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, salt and cayenne pepper. Peel the oranges, remove the seeds and white connecting tissue, and divide the pulp into convenient sized pieces; and the sugar, also the mint, very finely chopped, season, marinate with a French dressing made from the olive oil and lemon juice, and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

KAISER'S CHEF
COOKS BANQUET
FOR ALLY FEAST

No Trace of Crones Consomme. However, at Poincare's Table.

Paris, May 16—Through the fortunes of war, one of the chefs, the most appreciated by Emperor William and the Crown Prince in recent years, fed the delegates to the conference of the allies recently held in Paris. He was loaned to President Poincare by Jules Cambon, who brought him back to Paris from Berlin, where he had frequently had the honor of cooking for the Emperor.

The President decided at the outset that there should be no men, apt for military duty, sheltered at the Elisee during the war. Every man of mobilizable age, went to the front, including the chef and a considerable number of other valuable servants. The president's table, which had gained largely in reputation since the advent of Monsieur Poincare, suffered no serious during the first stages of the war, since no official dinner or banquets were given. The visits of the distinguished representatives of the allied powers, however, caused a great deal of anxiety until Monsieur Cambon proposed his chef. The man who had tickled the Kaiser's palate was considered sufficiently qualified and allowed to prepare the historical banquet of the Allies.

CHINA REVOLUTIONARY
